

Lorita C. Daniels is a doctoral student and a graduate research assistant for the Center for Public Administration and Policy at Virginia Tech. Her research interests include, but are not limited to community and economic development, low-income communities, gentrification, collaborative governance, deliberative democracy and social capital. She is also interested in understanding how communities develop an identity to place after a community redevelopment and how social, organizations and policies help to shape this identity.